Presentations on a variety of topics are welcome and considered. We particularly welcome presentations in keeping with our "Creating Communication Connections" theme. All presenters are required to pay registration fees. Presenters may not use their session to promote or sell products or services.

The MSHA conference committee is also pleased to welcome student proposals for the fall conference, and we are thrilled to continue featuring student research presentations that highlight the excellent work being done by students around the state. Students need not necessarily be currently enrolled in a Communication Disorders program in Montana. Individuals who have graduated but completed this research as part of their course of study within the last year may still submit their work as a student presentation. Students should list their faculty/practitioner mentors as co-authors.

Please see the Call for Papers proposal form for complete instructions on submitting a proposal. A complete proposal form as well as individual disclosure forms for each presenter must all be submitted for a proposal to be reviewed; incomplete submissions will not be considered. In addition, all presenters must be registered for the conference on the day of their presentation.

Applicants will be notified if their proposal has been accepted by May 31, 2018.
